Dear Dorthy Clark,

Last Sunday, July 20, there was an article by Mike Cochran, Associated Press Writer entitled "The Law West of the Pecos." The caption then went "Judge Roy Bean ruled with his own bizzare brand of justice." (bizarre)

In the interest of genealogy you may find this account interesting, "The Family of Judge Roy Bean" (enclosed).

THE FAMILY OF JUDGE ROY BEAN

THE LAW WEST OF THE PECOS
By Carol Beene Bean

His legend began before he died. It became even greater after he died. He was not a myth, but much of what has been said and written about him is mythical. He accomplished what few other men could have done. By using his homespun justice where more refined methods might have failed, he changed the law of the six-gun to Roy Bean's law and became one of the most widely known and colorful characters in the history of the Southwest.

"It was after Papa's death that people began trying to outdo each other in telling wild stories about the "Law West of The Pecos". Papa was the Law all right, but he was just a good, kind man with a hard job to do in a rough country. Poor Papa. May God rest his great soul". These are the words of Zulema Bean Voss, daughter of Judge Roy Bean, spoken in 1947 when she was 63 years old. Both she and her sister, Laura Bean Mellor, lived and died with the heartache that their father was the most maligned man in history. They adored him and he adored them. Roy educated his daughters well and would not allow abusive language to be used in their presence. They had the essence of refinement, were excellant horsewomen, and very respected by the cowpunchers.

Mrs. Voss told how her father was often host to a group of nuns from San Antonio when they came through the country seeking funds for their schools. "Before the railroads came through Langtry, Papa would always get together a squad of Rangers, ride out to meet the Sisters' carriage and escort them to town. Then he and the Rangers would escort the Sisters everywhere they wanted to go."

Roy's activities during the Civil War is a little known fact. A. J. Sowell, a collector of Texana, states in The San Antonio Express, "Roy Bean was attached to the command of General John R. Baylor as a spy and scout and was present when General Baylor, through stratagem, captured 800 Federal troops in a deep canyon where they had been located by Bean, and demanded their surrender, stating that the balance of his men, 1000 in number, with artillery, were in sight. These men, 250 in number, were scattered over the several miles of country coming in squads and raising a great dust. The Federal officer surrendered, but after the arms were stacked and the fact of the small force of Baylor disclosed, his chagrin and anger knew no bounds. He cursed and raved and, as the saying goes, tore his hair. Bean speaks in high terms of General Baylor and says that while he was rough and to some seemed to be over bearing, his judgement was good, his bravery and confidence in himself to accomplish things were sublime. The artillery of General Baylor as mentioned above consisted of one swivel gun mounted on a mule which always knocked the mule down when it was fired."

Two movies have been made about Judge Roy Bean but the only similarity to real life was his name. Yet his life story is so interesting, there is no need to make up more tales and add to the legend. In the first movie the Judge burned the homesteaders crops. Mrs. Voss said, "Why, there weren't any crops to burn around Langtry. There was hardly enough grass for Papa's sheep." The movie ended with the Texas Rangers gunning down the Judge. Both movies stressed the legend that Roy Bean was a self-appointed,"hanging" Judge, but no where can there be found a record of him ever hanging anyone. The second movie had Roy living with a Mexican girl and having an illegitimate child that he deserted. In real life he was married Oct. 28, 1866 in San Antonio, Texas to Maria Anastasia Virginia Chavez, daughter of Leandro M. Chavez. They had two sons, Roy, Jr. and Sam, and two daughters, Laura and Zulema, and an adopted son, John Toney. After their divorce, Roy took the children & Mrs. Bean remarried.

In the spring of 1882 Roy went west and stopped at a camp town called Eagles Nest where, among the railroad workers, there lived gamblers, drunks, gun-slingers, fortune hunters, painted ladies, and other such odds and ends of humanity where crime was rampant. Such were the early days West of The Pecos River where there was no law closer than 200 miles.

C. L. Sonnichsen in his book, ROY BEAN LAW WEST OF THE PECOS says: "The railroad contractors reflected that all this was happening in the United States of America among civilized people in the year 1882. They decided to ask for help, and the result was a letter from Major Converse to the Adjutant General of Texas (Chief of Texas Rangers) dated June 6, 1882. 'Our contractors on the pecos are daily annoyed by a lot of hard cases, and the only way we can maintain order will be to have 8 or 10 of your men at the pecos. Please aid us if you can do so' ".

Captain Oglesby of The Rangers came and looked over the situation and reported back, "There is the worst lot of roughfs,gamblers, robbers, and pickpockets collected here I ever saw, and without the immediate presents of State troops this class would prove a great deterant towards the completion of the road. There is nothing here for the Rangers to do but to hold this rough element in subjection and control them. The majority of the Railroad camps are in Pecos County. This immediate section, being 200 miles from Stockton, the nearest Court of Justice and the consequent minor offences go unpunished but I hope to remedy that in a few days by having a Magistrate appointed for this Precinct."

Pecos County records show that Roy Bean was appointed Justice of the Peace on Aug. 2, 1882 by the County Commissioners Court. He was living in Eagles Nest at the time. In September the detachment of Texas Rangers moved to Vinegaroon and Roy went with them to be where he was most needed. Vinegaroon, another Camp town, was so notoriously rough at this time that an ordinary citizen took his life in his hands to visit the place. People laughed when Roy Bean became Justice of the Peace. With a place full of Texas badmen, they thought a peace officer wouldn't last overnight; why, the United States Army couldn't clean it up. "Maybe so", said Roy. But they didn't laugh long. They saw the rough times and the badmen & they saw Roy Bean bring law and order to the West side of the Pecos River.

When the men finished their work on the railroad and moved on, Roy moved on too. He came to an un-named town (which he later named Langtry) beside the railroad water tank where the west bound track was to be joined to the east bound track. There he stayed and again set up his saloon and "Law West of The Pecos".

Roy was a tough hardy breed, who, like so many others in the Old West learned to live by his wits,along with being a dead shot which earned a lot of respect from the bad guys. He was very good at bluffing. He scared many out of the territory with threats of what he would do if they didn't leave. He threatened to hang everyone who was brought before him. There was no jail in Langtry. If someone got rough and rowdy he would tie him to a skinny tree out front and let him sit it out in the hot sun. His pay was small and usually late in arriving, if it came at all, so he declared his court to be self-sustaining and henceforth pocketed all fines, his favorite penalty. A hard luck story would cancel the fine. Roy Bean probably wouldn't last long as a Justice of the Peace these days, but neither would today's J.P. last very long in those wild and wooley days West of The Pecos River.

Everett Lloyd, who wrote LAW WEST OF THE PECOS, says, "Any man who could have himself elected Justice of the Peace, operate a saloon, store, billiard hall, be the sole custodian and proprietor of what was called the "courthouse" and under the title of "Law West of The Pecos", intimidate horse thieves, cattle rustlers, and crooked gamblers and make the landowners and ranchmen respect his authority was not an ordinary man. He was a product of our pioneer history, unique, quaint, interesting and useful with the saving grace of humor that lent color and picturesqueness to his career. He was the friend of preachers, priests, gamblers, and vagabonds, and to the extent of his ability contributed to any worthy cause. Selfishness was not a part of his nature -- Old Roy was hardboiled on the surface, but once get under his skin, and he would go to the limit to help those in distress." The late W. H. Dodd said Roy was a kind and sympathetic person. His decisions had more common sense than law in them.

Frank X Tolbert of THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS in TOLBERT'S TEXAS says, "Judge Roy Bean was a wonderfully humorus cynic. His marriage ceremonies usually went like this. 'Join hands. Give me $10. L hereby pronounce you man and wife, and may God have mercy on your souls.' His divorces cost $15. and were just as brief as the marriage rites." He was not supposed to grant divorces but he said a man should be able to rectify his mistakes. If he made a mistake in marrying a couple, then he should be able to correct it by un-marrying them.

Roy Bean was born about 1825 in Mason County, Ky. to Francis and Anna Bean. He had three brothers and a sister; Joshua, the oldest,fought in the Mexican War, was a Captain in the Regular Army, went to California where he was Alcalde of San Diego and became the first Mayor. Then in 1850 he was appointed Major General of The State Militia.He was assassinated Nov. 21, 1852.

The 2nd son, Samuel Bean, also fought in the Mexican War; was discharged in 1847 in New Mexico; married Petra Kirker in Mexico in March 1849 and was Sheriff of Dona Alto County, New Mexico when that county extended into what is now Arizona.

Roy also had a brother Jim and a sister Molly.

We have a letter given to the MACBEAN ARCHIVES by Alvis W. Bean of Hollywood, California. written Nov. 2, 1946. The letter is quoted here in full. As yet we cannot trace the identity of the writer nor Frank & Virgie.

Dear Frank and Virgie,

My hands shake so I can no longer hold a pen. I will be 94 next March. My great grandson is typewriting this letter for me. This is his last year in school, and will be soon in the army. Glad that your two boys made it thru the owful war and did not get killed or shot. When he took the old yellow letter out of the envelop it just crumpled apart. Here is the picture of Aunt Anna Bean that was pasted in the Bible for many years. We tried to make out the writing in the letter but it is hard. It was dated June 18, 1871.

Anna Bean born at the turn of the century and died during the war. Had five children. Joshua, Sam, Roy, Molly and Jim. Buried along side her husban Francis Bean. Mason Co., Ky. We have already had some snow and the wind has been cold. Everyone here is fine. Write me again.

Aunt Mattie.

With the letter is a tintype picture of Anna Bean, mother of Judge Roy Bean, which is shown in the Picture Section of this book.

Roy Bean died quietly in his bed at 3 AM March 16, 1903 surrounded by his friends. His death certificate says he was aged 78 - lobar pneumonia. Two days later his funeral was held in Del Rio, Texas in the home of Mr. Blair, a good friend of Roy's. The SAN ANTONIO EXPRESS said, "His death removes another of the pioneers and old Indian fighters of The Old West. He was not polished but from beneath his rough coating there emitted the sparkle of the gem underneath."

Roy was a charitable person who never turned down a tramp or hobo needing a handout, food or money. He saw to it that the widows in town had enough firewood to last them through the winter. He was fond of all children and left many pleasant memories among the Langtry youngsters who used to listen to his stories and ride his old horse, Bayo.

"When Roy died I lost a good friend," said W. H. Dodd, "and the poor of Langtry a liberal helper in time of need." "He was the most wonderful, kind, good and gentle father a girl could have," said Mrs. Voss, "but he was strong, and he was a good judge. One time he said to me; Emma,they can say anything they want to about me, but they can't touch my family." "May God rest his great soul".

7006 Francis Bean[1].

Much time and effort, and research, to find the identity of Francis Bean has been without success. He was probably born a short time before 1800 in Maryland but we have found no record of his birth. It's as if he "droped from the sky".Of all the stories about Judge Roy Bean we have seen and read, he never mentioned his family or parents, to give us a clue. We know that a Francis Bean came to Maryland nearly a hundred years before Roy was born and it is possible that he could have been the progenitor. When Francis Bean died we do not know, except that the above letter says he was bur. beside Anna in Mason Co., Ky. One suggestion we have heard is that Francis Bean himself came by way of England to Maryland, but this denys all historical records that he was b. in Maryland. So sum up, the authors have to say, "We just do not know Francis Bean's identity." He was probably m. in Maryland to Anna _____. They spend the rest of their lives in Mason Co., Ky., tho they appear on no Census records that we have seen. They had 5 ch. b. in Mason Co., Ky.

- Joshua H. Bean[2], b. ca 1817, Mason Co., Ky., d. by an assassin for an outlaw gang at San Diego, 11-21-1852 near his store located at San Gabriel Mission. As Alcade and also Mayor of San Diego he had become a very beloved person in the small community. But he had also made bitter enemies of the outlaw element. Two men, Cipriano Sandoval and Reyes Felix, were convicted and hanged for the murder, tho the first was probably innocent. Five years later another man, wealthy and of a powerful family, confessed to the crime but being protected by his family, he never paid for his crime. Joshua was a Mjr. General of The first California State Militia. It is said that Joshua and his brother Roy once organized a Stage Line between San Antonio and San Diego. For a time Roy lived with Joshua in San Diego before 1850 and Roy seemed to enjoy being "quite a blade" under the sponsorship of his popular brother. After Joshua's term as Mayor ended he opened a store near San Gabriel Mission close to Los Angeles

Dear Ms. Sherrill:

I have been in touch with Virginia Sherrill Myers of Winter Haven Fl, formerly of Rockville and a Cousin of mine since I talked with you on the Phone a month or so ago.

Enclosed is some Computer Print out of the Genealogical tables I have on the Sherrills and enough of the Bean Line to make the connection. My own line of BEAN S runs to over 200 names but this is minor. I'm Editing, correcting and rewriting 5 Books of Bean History and Genealogy consisting of 5000 pg. , 10,000 Families and perhaps 80,000 names. (If I live so long.)

There is a a surname CLARE used throughout the SHERRILL line usually as a Middle name. Can you shed any light on this practice?

If you find any goof-ups in my Sherrill records would you please drop me a line?

In High School I did an original research paper on the Wabash and Erie Canal based on Correspondence[love letters] in a trunk belonging to a Lady in Montezuma, IN. I think her mother or grandmother was being courted by a young Engineer working on the Canal. Can't remember the name but she lived in a big white house on the River a short distance North of US 36 [National Road] and the hugh front lawn was mowed by sheep grazing therein. Got an 'A' in High School and used it again in College, also getting an 'A' but I think the Professor kept my paper.

Sincerely,

Joseph S. Bean
